

Published based on Study looks to bacteria for biofuel

Study looks to bacteria for biofuel

OAK RIDGE, Tenn., Feb. 15 (UPI) -- Bacteria first found in Yellowstone's hot springs could make ethanol production from crops such as switchgrass commercially viable, U.S. researchers say.

Study looks to bacteria for biofuel

You can also find this article published on Study looks to bacteria for biofuel, and on the tag pages Bacteria, Crops, Ethanol Production, Hot Springs, oak ridge, tenn, Upi.